Several Stitches Required to Close Wound Suffered by Mike Hudz; Charge Laid by Two Boys Against Joe Michalsky.

A charge was laid with the R.C.M.P. Monday morning by Mike Hudz, 16 years, and Jimmy Sluzg, 15 years, against Joe Michalsky. It is reported that the two boys had trespassed on Michalsky's property on Sunday on their way to a slough where a number of youths were skating.

In order to get to the slough they had to cross Michalsky's property, through which runs the Old Man river. Unable to cross the river because of thin ice they turned back and it was at this point where they met Mr. Michalsky. The boys, in their charge, stated Mr. Michalsky threw a sharp instrument at them. Hudz received the full force of the instrument in his right arm. His windbreaker, sweater, shirt and underwear were cut and he suffered a wound which required several stitches to close. The boys ran to the home of Jimmy Sluzg where Hudz was given first aid and then taken to the hospital where he was given medical attention.

The hearing will be held within the next few days, the R.C.M.P. prosecuting.

St. John Ambulance Association to Sponsor New Year's Dance

Will Sell Tickets Through
Mines; $5.00 Savings Certificates To Be Given as Prizes.

St. John Ambulance Association has completed preparations to hold its annual New Year's dance on Tuesday, December 31, in the miners' hall. Tickets and posters have been printed. The tickets, sold in past years, will be made through the mines and a large sale is anticipated.

Two $5.00 savings certificates will go to some lucky winners. The sellers of the two winning tickets will also receive $5.00 certificates as their award.

It is the intention of the Association to donate 25% of the receipts to Coleman branch of the Canadian Red Cross and a special effort will be made to sell a record number of tickets so that the Red Cross will benefit to the fullest extent.

From the sale of these tickets comes the revenue for the entire year's operations of the association and they are deserving of everyone's support in their humane efforts to relieve the suffering of the injured.

Ice Being Made at Curling Arena

Will Endeavor to Organize
Club This Winter; Officers to Be Elected at Later Date.

A meeting of Coleman curling club was held on Sunday morning with nine members being present. It had been intended, had sufficient members attended, to elect new officers and plan for the new season. As it was much discussion took place as to the advisability of opening the arena in the face of such little interest.

It was finally decided to authorize Coleman Light & Water Co. to connect the light and water services and engage Harold Houghton to make ice, starting Monday morning.

A meeting of all curlers will be called when ice is available and it is hoped interest in the game will bring out the members. In the meantime last year's officers will carry on. Dues for this season will not be determined until a new slate of officers has been elected.

CIGARETTE FUND FOR SOLDIERS

People are urged to give to the collection on pay days at the bank, sponsored by the Canadian Legion. The money is used to purchase cigarettes and tobacco for Coleman boys serving overseas, and the committee in charge would like to get as generous response as possible so that they may continue their good work. If an average of 10¢ per month were given by each working man in Coleman, there would be ample to send a generous supply of smokes over.

The average collected, the committee reports, is five cents per month per working man. The Legion carries on this work for the benefit of the boys overseas, and the Ladies Auxiliary of the Legion make up parcels of comforts. Help in their work by making a small contribution monthly. Drop your coin in the slot next pay day. The boys overseas will know they are remembered.

Miss Manie Hamilton, R.N., of Blainmore, is the guest of Miss Joanna Flynn.

OPEN AIR RINK CROWDED WITH CHILDREN

For the past week the open air rink has been in operation, caretakers Sam Malanchuk and Fred Treka having built up a fine sheet of ice. Scores of children are to be seen and heard each evening. It was the time of their young lives as they skate around.

Boys and girls dressing rooms are well heated and the caretaker is always present to render first aid should skaters require it.

THEATRE NOTES

A sparkling comedy starring Gary Grant, Irene Dunne and Gail Patrick is the big feature, at the Palace this week-end. Reported shipwrecked and drowned, Irene Dunne, the wife, turns up seven years later to find her husband, Gary Grant, had married another woman, Gail Patrick. The antics of Gary to get himself out of such an embarrassing position keep the audience in a state of hearty laughter.

"Lillian Russell," one of the top-notch attractions of the winter season, will appear at the Coleman theatre at the week-end. The players are Alice Faye, Don Ameche and Henry Fonda. Alice Faye portrays the great Lillian Russell, ranking singing star and actress of the gay nineties. Edward Arnold and Warren Williams also appear in the film.

"My Son, My Son" starring the great English actress, Madeleine Carroll, and Brian Aherne and Louis Hayward play at the Palace tonight and Friday. The story is based on the 1899 best-selling novel by J. B. Priestley, a heart-rending story of a father and son fighting and striving against each other for the love of the same woman.

The Ladies Auxiliary of St. Paul's United church will hold the annual bazaar in the church club room on Saturday, Dec. 7.

GERMAN BOMBS CANNOT STOP THE BREAD OR THE SMILES

The indiscriminate German bombing of women and children has wrecked their home, but above the loaves of bread they carry to the London communal meal kitchen, the boy and girl can still smile. It is the spirit of London—a spirit that, combined with a powerful ground and air defence, has proved that a city can stand against any aerial bombardment.

Lions Club Host to Large Number of Guests on Charter Night

Philip Baker, of Lethbridge, Presented
Charter; Guests Welcomed to Coleman by Prominent Speakers.

The season's biggest social event to-date was crowned with success last Thursday evening when members of the local Lions club royally entertained a large number of guests from Lethbridge, Raymond, Welling and Macleod Lions clubs on the occasion of Coleman's charter night.

Raymond sent 28 representatives, Lethbridge, 15; Welling, 2; and Macleod, 3. In addition a number of Coleman people were guests.

The Italian hall was beautifully decorated in yellow and gold with the Union Jack prominently displayed. Three heavily food-laden tables centred the floor and approximately 110 guests sat down to a turkey supper. Supper commenced following the singing of "O Canada."

Toastmaster Harry Gardner introduced A. F. Short, vice-president of the local coal companies, who welcomed the guests. He congratulated the Coleman Lions club on their aggressiveness in promoting a service club in Coleman.

He wished it every success and pledged himself to give it every aid within reason. Toastmaster Gardner next introduced Mr. Frank Abousaif, councillor, who joined in welcoming the guests. He also wished the local club success and hoped it would do much to encourage civic pride in Coleman.

Other guests introduced were Mr. and Mrs. James Cousins, Mr. Cousins being guest pianist, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harrison, of Hillcrest, Mr. Harrison being one of the guest entertainers.

The highlight of Toastmaster Gardner's introductions was that of the cooks and waitresses at the supper who had donated their services freely so that the Red Cross would benefit from the money which would otherwise have had to be spent to pay for help. They included Mrs. Wm. Roughhead, who cooked the supper and whose idea it was that the Red Cross benefit from her and the other ladies' efforts; Mrs. O. Smith, Mrs. W. H. Garner, Mrs. W. Vincent, Mrs. John Morris, and the Misses "Peach" Vincent, Hilda Hillary, Isa Ramsay, Mary Garner, Hazel Thomas, Jean Jackson and Emma Rogers. A number of other ladies helped with the cooking, having been allotted certain delicacies which they cooked in their own homes.

An excellent entertainment program had been lined up and included two selections by the United church choir, "Land of Hope and Glory," and "Pilgrims Chorus." The choir led in a song by ladies' tire assemblage, "There'll Always be an England." Miss Wilde, of Raymond, sang two songs, "Chapel Bells" and "I Am A Canadian"; Mr. Wm. Harrison, billed as "The Wizard of the West" gave a very good performance in the art of magic and held his audience's rapt attention.

Lion Fred Guernard gave a most interesting address on Lionism. He dwelt on its formation and steady growth up to the present time. He stated it would be the aim of all Lions in Canada to direct their efforts towards helping in Canada's war effort.

Toastmaster Harry Gardner, who is also surveyor at McGillivray mine, had on display an exhibit showing the land structure of the McGillivray and International mines coal deposits. It showed the pitch of the various coal seams as well as other interesting data. A large blue print of McGillivray mine was also on display and Mr. Gardner explained where the coal had already been mined and at which point the coal was being mined at the present time.

The highlight of the evening came when Philip Baker, past president of Lethbridge club, and now zone president for Southern Alberta, made his presentation speech. Local members were introduced to the gathering. In his speech Lion Baker listed the obligations to which the members pledged themselves.

In accepting the charter on behalf of the Coleman club, President Dr. Rose sent out a stirring challenge to those defeatists who had stated that to successfully follow the charter, invited those who just couldn't be done. Because other clubs had failed was no reason why this particular club should fail. He listed three objectives for the Coleman club: 1. To perpetuate the love of Nature; 2. Encourage good fellowship among all classes and nationalities; 3. co-operate with other local organizations in promoting civic projects.

Raymond and Lethbridge delegates, following the presentation of the charter, invited those present to their charter nights on Monday, November 26, at Raymond and Friday, December 6, at Lethbridge. The event is to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the founding of Lethbridge club.

At the end of the program there was a fifteen-minute intermission to clear away the tables and chairs to make room for dancing, music being played by Arcadians' orchestra.

The evening's festivities came to a close at 1:30 a.m. Friday. Two car loads of Coleman Lions and their ladies motored to Raymond on Monday to attend the Raymond club's charter night.

Dave Poy, goalkeeper for Edmonton Flyers, spent a few days in town this week. He played for Flyers against Turner Valley Oilers on Wednesday evening.

Medicine Hat Seeks Entrance Into Intermediate League

A letter has been received by Angelo Gentile from Bob. Tufts, sports editor of the Medicine Hat News and also secretary of the hockey association in that town, asking Coleman and Blainmore clubs to favorably consider allowing Medicine Hat entrance into the league.

A meeting of the league had been called for Tuesday evening but failed to materialize.

Lethbridge is still interested in entering the league, and it is possible it may be a four-team league, as Macleod seems to be experiencing difficulty regarding the opening of the arena.

Wm. Cole, who sponsored Bellevue Intermediates last year, states he will not manage the league this year. As a result Bellevue is not expected to show any interest in the proposed league.

AMY CELLI HAD CLOSE CALL

Amy Celli, Coleman youth, had a close call from death some weeks ago while serving in Britain with Canada's forces. She was in a town in England during a Nazi bombing raid. One bomb dropped and Amy rushed out to see what damage had been done. As she came out of her shelter another bomb dropped close by. The concussion knocked Amy unconscious. He soon recovered however, and according to his brother, Jerry, he is none the worse from his experience.

Mickey Hennessy Died At Calgary On Sunday

Funeral Held on Tuesday Morning; Well Known Coleman Character.

Death came to a Coleman old-timer on Saturday in Calgary in the person of Mickey Hennessy, aged 74 years. Deceased left Coleman four years ago to reside at Calgary, when failing eyesight caused him to leave his residence at Crows Nest Lake, where he had lived alone.

He was born at Springhill, Nova Scotia, and came west in his youth. He worked for a number of years in the coal mines around Nanaimo and at one time suffered a serious accident which caused him to lose and later resulted in partial blindness. He came to Coleman in 1923 where he secured employment at McGillivray mine.

In 1926 he played a heroic part in the McGillivray mine explosion in his efforts to save several men trapped in the lower depths.

As old age crept upon him he took up residence in an old shack on the shore of Crows Nest Lake, where he spent many a happy day fishing, the one sport which seemed to give him real enjoyment.

As his sight gradually failed, machinery was set in motion to have his case recognized by the Workmen's Compensation Board. The sponsors of this movement were successful and Mickey was granted a pension.

Deceased, in his youth, was an exceptionally clever boxer and at one time was sparring partner for Gentleman Jim Brown, when the latter was in his heyday. It has been stated that Mickey taken himself seriously in the fight game he would have gone far in the realm of boxing.

The funeral was held from Jacques Funeral Home on Tuesday morning, with Requiem High Mass at St. Mary's Cathedral. Jack McDonald and Tom Lawler motored to Calgary on Monday to attend the funeral.

And so there passes on another of the links of the days when the west was young. Mickey was a "square shooter" right to the last.

Thaw Prevents Skating at Arena

Had Been Scheduled to Open Last Sunday Evening; Will Open as Soon as Weather Permits

Pop-Eye and his helpers have now built up a large enough ice base to allow skating but thawing winds refuse to subside the rink remains closed to public skating.

It had been intended to open the arena last Sunday afternoon, but a thaw set in and the opening was postponed until Monday. The weather was still unfavorable for skating and now the opening has been postponed till colder weather comes.

Hockey season tickets have been selling slowly but with ice now in the arena it is expected the ticket sale will take a decided spurt. In order to enjoy the full benefit of a ticket, prospective purchasers should buy now. Tickets can be had from Gordon Norcombe at the bank or from public school teacher. With the arena opening so early in the season a ticket holder stands to make a big saving financially in this winter sport.

OTHERWISE "ALL RIGHT"

Irrepressible is the spirit of the Canadian seafarer. After being ten days afloat in the open sea following the sinking by enemy action of the S.S. "Saint Malo," Douglas Lane, who had been chief steward of that ship, reporting from "Somewhere in Scotland" to the victualling department of the Canadian National (West Indies) Steamships company.

"Sunk, saved and smiling. Slight case of French feet and wound in leg, and being looked after royally. Please advise. Best regards."

THE AIR TRAINING PLAN—AN OPINION

"I want to tell you the wonderful story of the part Canada is playing in the training of this vast Air Training Plan, which is one of the greatest things that has ever happened in the British Empire. . . . The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan is the biggest single enterprise that Canada has ever undertaken." Sir Evelyn Whelan, BBC Broadcast, September 23.

YOU NEED A REMINGTON TYPEWRITER

Today's business methods require the use of a typewriter, no matter how small, unless a typewriter. The outdated method of in most instances illegible handwriting has gone by the board. It is antiquated and annoying, a time-loser and a source of general caseness, particularly when trying to decipher most of the scrawls. You can purchase a Remington typewriter for cash or on terms. Dealers gladly given at The Journal office.

Educational Objectivity

While this is correctly diagnosed as an age of specialization in industry, there is a danger because of this, of too strong a trend in the direction of specialization in education in the common schools of the land, that is to say, in the public and high schools.

As a speaker in Regina, Saskatchewan, recently pointed out in a public address, "education is a process and not a product." In other words, it is a means to an end and not an end in itself, and a means to a rightly conceived end. Education in the common schools, properly applied, should be designed to train for citizenship rather than to train for jobs.

If this objective is lost sight of, and there is some danger that it may be if present trends are permitted to persist and expand, instead of the schools turning out young people able to take their proper places in democratic society and intelligently perform the functions of a democratic citizen, we may find our society comprised of a large body of people whose sole interests in life are technical and whose ability to understand and appreciate the finer things of life are close to zero.

If the democratic order, for the maintenance of which we are even now spilling blood and pouring out treasure to an unprecedented degree, is to be preserved, it is essential that mass opinion be sufficiently intelligent to direct its own public affairs. If democratic rule is to survive, it is essential that it be directed by an enlightened public opinion. Public opinion cannot be enlightened unless the people who form it are able to think for themselves and to solve their own problems. The people cannot think for themselves and make any valuable contributions to the problems of government and of society, unless they have been trained to do so, and this dictates a foundation of broad, cultural education.

On Sound Foundation

For this reason, if for no other, education in the public and high schools should be confined to the cultivation of the mind, to a training in the attributes and functions of good citizenship. On this foundation specialized instruction for a life vocation can be safely superimposed, to the advantage of the individual and of society at large.

Until this basic cultural and mental attainment has been acquired, intensive technical training should be held in abeyance, except perhaps for a small minority, as, for instance, those whose mental equipment is so limited that they are unable to make any progress in the cultural field and those who, by reason of peculiar circumstances, will be unable to complete a high school course.

The demand which has grown up in recent years for specialized technical training for young people of below grade 12 standing is largely the result of the abandonment of the apprenticeship system, under which industry itself undertook to prepare youth for a vocation in life. Since the burden of training for industrial life has been thrown upon the public educational system, where it does not and should not belong. More recently and particularly in the United States, factory schools have come into vogue, an indication that industry is again resuming the responsibility which it shed when apprenticeship went into the discard.

The present day trend towards specialized technical training of mentally immature young people is not only detrimental to the individual, but is inimical to the interests of society generally. It deprives the former of the opportunity of enjoying the fuller life and the latter of a large body of well informed and cultured citizenry.

The Goal Ahead

With the exception of those few to whom reference has been made, youth should be required to complete a high school course, after which the student is well equipped to undertake specialized training for a life vocation in state-aided technical schools, private technical schools or, better still, in factory schools directly connected with industry.

Only by following this course can the educational system of the country, as exemplified in the common schools, be expected to make their proper contribution towards the preservation of democratic ideals and provide the leaven necessary to enable the citizenry to move towards that desirable goal—the strengthening of our democratic institutions and an ever improving democratic regime.

It is to conserve this ideal for the world at large and to ensure the perpetuation of civilization in its highest form that Great Britain is enduring devastation and suffering and this country is pledged to a program of sacrificial contributions. When the fight is over and the battle won, the foundations for an abiding and every broadening and enlightened democracy must have been well and truly laid, if the suffering and sacrifices are not to have been in vain.

Have Become Thrifty

Munition Workers in Britain Not Spending Their Money Foolishly
British munitions workers of today are a strangely sober lot.

They are more intent on getting out of debt and on saving money than they were during the delirious war boom of 1914-18 when they annoyed the "upper classes" by buying pianos and fur coats.

At least this is the conclusion reached by Charles Madge of the Institute of Economic and Social Research after a study of family expenditures in the typical munitions town of Coventry, as published in the Economic Journal.

He found that skilled workers in Coventry are getting between $28 and $40 a week (thanks partly to considerable overtime while semi-skilled workers doing piecework and willing to work seven nights a week, are earning up to $52 and $56 a week. In all, 48 per cent. are earning more than they did in September, 32 per cent. are earning about the same and 20 per cent. are earning less.

But the striking part is that 57 per cent. of the families are saving money every week—in addition to their routine payments for pensions and burial insurance and for holiday benefits—and of the remaining 43 per cent. the vast majority are paying off arrears of rent and doctors' bills and grocery bills.

Airplane Bombsight

United States Releases To Britain Highly Effective Type

The United States has released to Britain an outmoded type of airplane bombsight which is considered highly effective, but is valued more as the secret signet now used by U.S. army and navy planes, it was learned at Washington.

The bombsight was handed to the British for experimental purposes and the Royal Air Force, if satisfied with its performance, may apply for its release for production.

For Propaganda Purposes

Nazis Photograph Their Crushed Planes Describing Them As British

The London Times says: The Germans are finding it so difficult to obtain R.A.F. bombers to photograph for propaganda purposes that they are taking pictures of their own crashed aircraft and describing them as British.

A case occurred on September 14, when the Völkischer Beobachter published in its North German edition an impressive photograph of a wrecked airplane, alleged to be a British machine which had been shot down. It was accompanied by the triumphant caption: "The end of a British air pirate. He tried to cross the French coast, but our air defenses were on the look-out and brought him down."

The aircraft is, in fact, quite clearly a Junkers 88. The curious un-English draughtsmanship of the death's head painted on the fuselage in true Nazi fashion would in itself arouse the suspicion of the observant, and a closer examination of the wreckage reveals it beyond any doubt as a Junkers 88, hundreds of which have been shot down over this country.

A comparison of photographs shows that they were identical machines.

Gifts Keep Coming

Punjab Police Force Takes Salary Cut To Buy Plane

The flood of gifts from all parts of the Empire in aid of Britain's fighting forces continues, the British Broadcasting Corporation reports.

Among the gifts recently acknowledged was $10,000 from the British community in Istanbul and $15,000 from the Madras Governor's War Fund, making a total of $252,454. The B.B.C. also reported that officers of the Punjab Police Force have agreed to a salary cut of 20 per cent. to provide a fighter aircraft for the defence of India.

Use Of Magnesium

Is Increasing For Airplane Construction And Incendiary Bombs

Use of magnesium in incendiary bombs is a comparatively recent development and is contributing to increasing demand for this metal which is also proving of high value in the manufacture of light alloys for airplane construction. The incendiary bombs are usually thickwalled tubes nine inches long and two inches in diameter and weigh one kilogram, or 2.2 pounds. The tube is made of an alloy containing about 93 per cent. of magnesium and seven per cent. of aluminum while the hollow interior is filled with a priming composition of thermit type.

Upon impact the priming material ignites spontaneously and burns at a temperature of 2,500 degrees centigrade for 40 to 50 seconds. This melts and ignites the tube and the magnesium then burns for 10 to 20 minutes at a temperature of about 1,300 degrees centigrade.

While Germany has been the chief producer of magnesium, British and American production is being increased. Canada has not as yet produced magnesium commercially although Consolidated Smelters and others have done experimental work for some years. A Canadian company, Transcontinental Resources Limited, is interested in brine deposits in Utah from which it is planned to produce magnesium in the near future.

Travel To Canada

New York Daily Mirror Gives This Advice To Americans

"Travel to Canada" is the editorial advice to Americans in large display type contained in the New York Daily Mirror.

"It is generally agreed that most Americans want to knit the nations of this hemisphere in a solid bloc that can resist any attempted invasion," says the Mirror. "It is further agreed that most Americans want to aid England in any way short of war."

"Best way to contribute to both these aims is to spend your 'travel dollars' in Canada. A Canadian company, Transcontinental Resources Limited, is interested in brine deposits in Utah from which it is planned to produce magnesium in the near future."

"Alumni should not be permitted to fan rumors about border inspection into foolish fears that will keep Americans from planning a trip to Canada."

"The simple fact is that no more identification than a voter's registration certificate or membership in any automobile club is needed for entry into Canada, or return to America."

Nazi Troops Ignored

French People Are Adopting Hostile Attitude Towards Invaders

The best bit of news of Parisians has been the reopening of the fashionable Bois de Boulogne to the French. Until recently the Germans had closed it, but now the Parisians are flocking back to their favorite park. The greatest check to normalcy is, of course, the presence of German troops, toward whom the French people are said to have adopted a more hostile attitude. Gone are the usual comments that the troops are "correct and polite." The French now have picked up the Duce's method of completely ignoring the presence of the invader.—Variety, New York.

Air Raid Shelter

Largest In The World Said To Be In New York

Biggest and most completely equipped potential air raid shelter in the world is right in the middle of Manhattan, New York.

It is the vast system of underground chambers and corridors extending below six city blocks that comprises the operations centre of the world's largest skyscraper development, Rockefeller Centre, which houses The Associated Press, The Canadian Press, the National Broadcasting Company, the Radio City Musical Hall and thousands of smaller tenants.

Here, farther below ground than any bomb known could penetrate, and protected by the bulk of the buildings above, is a mass of engine rooms, workshops, warehouses, loading platforms and ramps capable of sheltering 55,000 persons.

The labyrinth starts below the centre's underground shopping concourse and goes down four levels 70 feet below ground—below sea level in some places.

The space is ventilated, lighted and heated by self-contained machine units which supply the buildings above. It contains a complete restaurant for building employees in addition to several kitchens of restaurants above.

Got Their Wish

Conscientious Objectors In Channel Islands Now Under Nazi Rule

German troops occupying the Channel Islands have captured a hundred British conscientious objectors. They are part of a batch of 200 sent in the first week of June to help with the potato harvest. Many of the 200 told the conciliatory tribunals that they would be quite unconcerned if the Nazis invaded Britain; others said that they would just as soon live under Hitler as under a democracy.

When German invasion first threatened the Channel Islands, most of the conscientious objectors tried to get back to Britain. Some stowed away in cargo boats. Others were allowed to evacuate after the women and children and the fighting men had got away. A number were too late. Few preferred to stay and live under Nazi rule.—Brandon Sun.

Smallest Watch

Swiss-American Watchmaker Builds World's Thinnest Timepiece

Max Argent, Swiss-American watchmaker, made what is believed to be the smallest accurate watch in the world. It is smaller than the average man's fingernail. Argent's hobby is watchmaking. It took him two hours daily for one year to make the tiny watch, which is 3-32nds of an inch thick and 17-32nds of an inch in diameter. The screws of the watch have the diameter of a pinpoint and the pinions are only as thick as a human hair.

Story Being Revealed

Wife Of Former French Premier Was Great Political Figure

The Toronto Telegram says: Gradually the story of the Countess Helen de Portes, close friend and political adviser to French Premier Paul Reynaud, is being revealed. Censorship gummed up the story at the time of her death in a motor accident last June, but Andre Maurois gave some inkling of the truth a while ago in Collier's. Lillian Mowrer who lectured in Town Hall Series, can tell the rest of it. When the tale is fitted together from all sources, the young countess is revealed as one of the big-scale grafters in history. Politicians crossed her palm with silver to get appointments and in Paris it was the slogan: "Allez voir Madame de Portes, elle ouvre." She was beautifully dressed, free, by the best couturiers. She was the daughter of a French industrialist, Charles Sans Rebulet, and had no more education than a French bourgeois girl. Her marriage to the Count helped her form a political salon. Her best friend was Mme. Georges Bonnet, and through her she met Laval, Flandin and Reynaud. The Countess conducted her salon on a business basis and received sums for political favors.

In 1931, under the prodding of the Princess Bibesco, she first noticed Reynaud. The two fell madly in love, and her influence surrounded him like an impenetrable wall. In 1935 she went pro-Nazi and secured appointments for people who spread a spirit of defeatism. When Reynaud became premier, she was with him constantly, and it was she who convinced him further fighting was futile. When they planned escape from France with one hundred million gold francs was discovered Reynaud took the Countess in a high-powered car, although he was no driver. A crash resulted and she was killed.

Desperate Gambler

Hitler's Ramshackle Empire Is Resting On Weak Supports

The best picture one can draw of Hitler from available evidence is not that of the Nazi propagandist; it is the picture of the desperate gambler of the Wilhelmstrasse, pyramiding his winnings under ever greater pressure until they have built up into an overgrown, uneasy, disorganized and precarious empire, resting on the fearfully weak reeds of Italy and Japan, driven to dicker with the Soviets, and baffled in every attempt to break the supreme centre of resistance in the hearts of the British people.

And this ramshackle empire faces a steadily growing British air power, delivering ever heavier and heavier blows, and backed not only by the full resources of the British Commonwealth but in ever greater measure by the full industrial power of the United States.

If one looks at deeds (of which Hitler is so fond) and not at the words, communique and propaganda, this seems to be the picture. What power Hitler may yet have suddenly to reverse it, we do not know. He is fertile in surprise, and he has certainly not yet exhausted the immense reserves of German strength. No one would imagine for a moment that the war has been won.

But these are some of the reasons for believing that the prospect is actually brighter to-day than in many months, and for believing, too, that the shortest road to peace and a genuine reconstruction of the world is straight down the road to which not only the British people, but the American people as well, have set themselves.—New York Herald Tribune.

British Land Troops On Greek Soil And Receive Welcome

Athens.—British soldiers, forced from Europe last summer on the fall of France, have regained a continental foothold on the Greek mainland, it was disclosed as Greek troops pushed on into Albania.

British warships transported an undisclosed number of soldiers—non-combat forces, all of them military specialists—across the Mediterranean without interference from Italian planes or warships, it was reported, and landed them at Greek ports some time ago. They were welcomed enthusiastically by the populace and since have been aiding the Royal Air Force in its battle against the Italians.

In the Greek-Italian fighting, a Greek spokesman said, advance units of the Greek army have reached Pogoradetz, about 25 miles north of Koritza, the base which was captured last week from the Italians.

He also confirmed reports that the Greeks have occupied Maschopolis, about 11 miles northwest of Koritza.

Other reports said the Greeks have occupied the rocky heights above Argirocastro, main Italian base in southern Albania, in the general drive which has carried some units 15 miles forward.

The Italians were reported trying to reorganize their retreating forces to form a second line of defence but the exact position of the line was not known here.

Royal Air Force headquarters disclosed that Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, commander of all British Air Forces in the Mediterranean, made a quick visit to Greece and inspected R.A.F. squadrons.

He expressed satisfaction at the speed and efficiency with which the units went into action and with their successes. During the visit he was received by King George and had an interview with Premier Metaxas and Gen. Papagos.

(A Reuters despatch from Athens said numbers of British, Australian and New Zealand armies landed at a Greek harbor a few days from warships.

The entire operation of landing the "Tomnies" was carried out in daylight under a clear sky, it was said. The British warships steamed into one port in "Indian file." They docked quickly and within 15 minutes after the vessels threw out lines to Greek dockhands the gangplanks were lowered and British troops with packs and full equipment were disembarking on Greek soil.

As they landed, cranes hauled equipment from the ships. A crowd on the pier at this port cheered as the troops piled into buses which took them to their quarters.

Groups of people had gathered along the route. When the buses were halted by traffic, many people rushed out to shake hands with the "Tomnies" and gave a great demonstration of enthusiasm.

The soldiers were not combat forces, but specialists for communication and transport and supplies. They were brought over to help the R.A.F. operating from Greek bases.

The Greek spokesman, discussing the Italian retreat, said the Fascists were showing a tendency to establish a second line of defence.

Despite rainy weather, the Greeks were reported to be attacking the Italian lines. They minimized the effect of Italian attempts to bomb Koritza and Greek advance units.

Conditions in Koritza were said to be nearly normal again with the Greek military and gendarmes establishing order. A despatch from the city, which had been the main base for the Italian invasion, said the airport was useless as a result of the heavy Greek and British air raids on the city before the Greeks captured it.

Goes Over The Top

Canadian First Division Contributed Generously To Spitfire Fund

Somewhere in England.—The Canadian First Division's Spitfire fund went over the top and the $22,250 raised by voluntary contributions by officers and men will be presented shortly to Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production. A huge bottle labelled "A Blitz Against Hitler" stood in the lobby of divisional headquarters. Passers-by tossed in small change.

Further Sacrifices Will Be Necessary To Prosecute War

Ottawa.—Canada's third war loan will be undertaken next summer, with a campaign patterned on the Victory loan campaigns of the first Great War, Finance Minister Isley announced.

"The amount which we will need to raise will require the creation of a broad national organization to ensure that all persons who are financially able to subscribe for war bonds shall be directly approached," Mr. Isley told the House of Commons.

"As a people, we must develop a full understanding of our joint responsibility for the results which we wish to obtain."

War-time borrowing and increased taxation, the minister emphasized, were essential not only to finance the war program but, more fundamentally, to restrict civilian buying.

When Canadians generally appreciated the fact that "probably more" than one-fifth of the entire national income now was being devoted to war purposes, they would realize the sacrifices each would be required to make.

The finance minister warned against an "excessive and dangerous" optimism regarding the present state of the war. The war was not won, Canadians were too assured of victory, not sure enough that the important things in their lives were really in jeopardy.

An "excessive and dangerous" optimism as to the outcome of the war existed, Mr. Isley warned. "We are assured too much so," he told the House of Commons.

"We feel vaguely that the important things in our lives are at stake, but we are not so sure that they are in jeopardy. Instead of consciousness, every waking moment of the deadly peril of a powerful enemy, many of us have a feeling that the battle of Britain is won, that all is well."

The war was not won, he declared,

Population Boost

National Registration Indicates There Are More Than Twelve Million People In Canada

Ottawa.—Figures released on national registration indicated Canada now has a population considerably more than 12,000,000, compared with 10,376,788 at the last census in 1931.

National registration embraces only persons of 16 years and upwards and the total number registered is more than 8,000,000. Census officials explained that in the 1931 census 66 per cent. of the total population was composed of persons 16 years and upwards.

If the ratio is the same now as in 1931, officials said, then there now are more than 4,000,000 persons in Canada under 16 years, or a total population of better than 12,000,000.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of national war services, announced in a statement that, during national registration on Aug. 19, 20 and 21, 7,860,470 persons registered. Registrations since that date of persons who reached the age of 16 brought the total to more than 8,000,000.

Of those listed during the August registration period, 3,988,760 were males and 3,861,710 females.

Desert Fighting

Australian Armies Have Aerial Battle In Egypt

Calcutta.—Britain's air fighters are now fighting the enemy in the skies of Greece and Albania, the Royal Air Force announced, while Australian aircraft have engaged in their first aerial battle in Egypt's west desert.

A lengthy communique also told of an attack on Bari, southeastern Italian embarkation point to Albania, by long-distance bombers of the R.A.F. carried out during last weekend. Bomb hits were scored on the main jetty, and fires and explosions occurred which are believed to have damaged ships lying alongside.

So swiftly are the British fighters going into action that the communique said that one unit, which arrived Nov. 18, moved to its operational base the next morning, was fighting the enemy the same afternoon and downed eight Italian biplane fighters.

Assumes New Post

Winnipeg Man Appointed Associate Deputy Minister Of Labour

Ottawa.—Arthur MacNamara, of Winnipeg, has been appointed associate deputy minister of labor, Hon. Norman McLeary, minister of labor, announced.

Mr. MacNamara held the position of deputy minister of public works and labor in the Manitoba government until he came here a few months ago on loan to the department of national defence as chairman of the dependents' allowance board.

In his new position Mr. MacNamara will be associated with Dr. Bryce M. Stewart, who recently accepted appointment as deputy minister of labor for the duration of the war.

Will Come Later

Educationalists Meet

Study New Methods Of Emphasizing Canadian Citizenship

Ottawa.—Educational authorities from every province except Alberta met in conference and discussed possibilities of a Dominion-wide campaign to bring Canadians to greater consciousness of Canadian nationality by co-ordinating efforts of the press, radio, motion pictures, religion and education.

Government departments, universities, secondary and primary schools, the Canadian Legion and various educational organizations were represented.

The conference was called by Education Minister C. H. Blakeney of New Brunswick with the idea of creating a national body to study present educational trends and recommend new methods of emphasizing Canadian citizenship.

Mr. Blakeney said he expected the movement would stimulate war morale and set a foundation for peace morale.

Hon. Duncan MacArthur, minister of education for Ontario, said the teaching of citizenship should have specific direction.

"The problem is not one of discussion, but of participation," he said. "We are not going to make good citizens of our children by mere talk."

Problem For Italy

Damaged Ships Will Have To Be Moved For Repairs

London.—Crippling of the Italian fleet at Taranto faced the Italian command with a serious problem of repair because the work must be done in private shipyards, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported.

The BBC said Italy does not build her warships in naval shipyards but has them constructed under contract by private firms.

"Therefore," said BBC, "at least one of the battleships probably will have to be taken to Trieste or some other port where there is a private shipyard, such a move would bring obvious hazard."

For Military Training

Ottawa.—A group of 250 men of the 21, 22- and 23-year-old classes left Ottawa for 30 days' military training at Curnutt training centre. Among them were several who came here from western Canada to join the civil service and were called up for training with other Ottawa youths.

Take Delivery Of All Wheat During Present Crop Year

Ottawa.—The government intends to take delivery of all of the 1940 wheat crop during the present crop year which ends July 31, 1941, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced in the House of Commons.

To this end additional wheat storage space will be constructed and the general delivery quota will be increased next week from the present level of eight bushels an acre to ten.

Speaking in the throne speech debate, the minister said: "We all fully recognize that a wheat policy covering the 1941-42 crop year must be announced some time in February, well in advance of the seeding season."

A sub-committee of the advisory committee to the Canadian Wheat Board was appointed recently and now is working on possible plans for 1941 and ensuing years and will report to the whole committee early in December, the minister said.

The minister said plans for the 1941 wheat crop would depend upon circumstances but from the standpoint of the trade department that policy would "have to be decided upon with a knowledge that apart from domestic consumption only between possibly 140,000,000 and 175,000,000 bushels can be exported in the crop year ending July 31, 1942."

His department had to do only with marketing facilities the minister told the house.

"Any matters relating to operations on the farm lie within the jurisdiction of my colleague, the minister of agriculture and the provincial departments of agriculture," he said.

Meanwhile the government is making arrangements, the minister said, "so that all the wheat deliverable from the 1940 crop will be accepted by the wheat board prior to the end of the present crop year."

Mr. MacKinnon's speech dealt exclusively with the wheat problem which has been a matter of frequent debate at recent sessions, and during the last few days in the house.

At the approaching of the 1940 fall harvesting season, Mr. MacKinnon said, the wheat on hand was 273,086,845 bushels. The new crop apparently will now amount to 520,000,000 bushels.

This meant a strain on storage facilities which could handle about 420,000,000 bushels, allowing for working space. The government set itself the task of handling 288,000,000 bushels of the new crop by December 1.

Delivery quotas were arranged so that there might be an equitable sharing of this elevator space, the first being fixed at five bushels each of grain, oats and barley per seed acre.

The quotas on barley and oats proved unnecessary because deliveries were low. On Sept. 9 the quotas on wheat were increased to eight, 10, 12 and 15 bushels in certain areas leaving the general quota at five bushels.

On Sept. 13, the minister said, the general quota was raised to eight bushels. At the present time 70 per cent. of the shipping centres have quotas of more than eight bushels, some going as high as 20 where exceptional storage space is available.

"I am now informed that the general quota will be raised to 10 bushels," the minister said. "There will be further quotas established from time to time during the crop year as wheat is moved into export and consumption channels."

Wheat acreage in Canada is 27,750,000 with the average yield in the prairie provinces 18.7 bushels. Allowing 68,500,000 bushels for feed, seed and other farm purposes, Mr. MacKinnon said, this left a marketable surplus from the fall crop of 451,500,000 bushels. Total possible deliveries so far amount to 298,603,000 bushels but deliveries on Nov. 15 amounted to only 223,919,660 bushels.

"You will see that the board has been successful through the splendid co-operation of the elevator companies, in providing storage sufficient to look after the marketable surplus from a much greater than average crop," he said.

Lack Of Planes

Britain Did Not Have One Spitfire At Time Of Munich Crisis

Ipwich, Eng.—Sir Neville Henderson, former British ambassador to Germany, in a speech here said he did not know whether the critics of the late Neville Chamberlain realized then or now that on Sept. 28, 1938—at the climax of the Munich crisis—"we did not have a Spitfire."

"We had one or two experimental Hurricanes and seven modern anti-aircraft guns for the defence of London out of 400 estimated as the minimum necessary," he added.

Check Communism

Montreal.—Royal Canadian Mounted Police carried out a series of raids in the east end of Montreal. A number of persons, suspected of Communist activity, were taken into custody. A quantity of literature was seized.

Greek Stand Has Forced Revision Of Axis Time Table

London.—Mussolini told his people that Greece's back would surely be broken, but thus far the only fracture of the Italo-Greek war seems to be Italian, not Greek.

The back of the Italian attack all along the 100-mile front is obviously bending if not already fractured. Whatever her ultimate fate, Britain has struck a stunning blow at Italian prestige, already dimmed by Britain in Egypt and at sea.

It seems probable, too, that the Greek stand has forced a drastic revision of the axis time-table and ruled out the possibility of any early dramatic German-Italian action in eastern theatre of war.

There are hints of that from Berlin. Nazi commentators talk of the big push in the east coming next spring, not this winter.

Obviously the Greek stand has done more than bolster anti-axis sentiment in Turkey. It has contributed new and positive elements to the military situation in the Mediterranean likely to give Spain pause in risking belligerency as an axis ally.

European observers have predicted a vast axis-Spanish pincer movement to attack the eastern and western pillars of British control of the Mediterranean simultaneously. Those are the Suez canal and Gibraltar, some 2,000 miles apart, air line. The pivot of any such movement necessarily would be Italy. Availability of Italian air and sea power in full strength would be the first requisite of success.

It does, however, is now committed to major military operations in Greece. He has promised his people to break Greece's back quickly. Failure to do so would defeat him in Italian eyes as well as those of the world.

The ill-starred Italian attack on Greece has tightened, not slackened, Britain's hold on the Mediterranean. New British naval and air bases on Greek soil are close to Italy. By that route, much of Italy's vaunted air power is immobilized for attack, restricted to home defence.

Any substantial Italian contribution to a German-Spanish attack on Gibraltar seems out of the question until the situation in Greece is eased. Whatever the pro-axis sympathies of the Franco regime in Spain, that fact cannot be ignored in Spanish policy making.

The risks of Spanish belligerency would be great in any case. Immediate shutting off of sea access to Spain for vitally needed foodstuffs would result. A famine winter there would reopen Spanish civil war wounds.

By every rule of reason, the first business of Mussolini and Hitler is to clear up the Italo-Greek war scene in their favor, which may take considerable time even if Germany comes down through Bulgaria on the Greek flank. Until Greece has been dealt with, a gigantic expansion of the war front in the east would seem more an axis move desperation than of victory confidence.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

THESE are some smart magazines published in the United States which have wide circulation in Canada. They have some influence on Canadian public opinion, sometimes not to our advantage. "Life" claims a circulation larger than any other weekly magazine, over 20,000,000 weekly. "Time" also has a very large circulation, while Collier's and The Saturday Evening Post run into millions weekly. In Canada our own Maclean's Magazine is the most creditable twice-a-month publication, comparing most favorably with United States magazines. It serves a population of about eleven millions of people, whereas the U.S. publications mentioned have nearly 130 millions, to which Canada is added.

THESE comparisons serve to show the handicap under which Canadian publications labor. On the other hand, they promote national sentiment in Canada and for that reason apart from the reader interest they possess, should be supported by Canadian people. Maclean's really is a national magazine. In direct contrast might be mentioned "Liberty," an U.S. magazine which publishes a Canadian edition. A few months ago it was discovered trying to ride two horses. Its Canadian edition was playing up to British sentiment, while its U.S. edition was expressing an entirely different viewpoint. Its editorial policies apparently were governed entirely by mercenary motives, to cultivate popular opinion by pure opportunism.

THE following from the Ottawa Journal entitled "Newspapers Safer," shows how public opinion in Canada might be unfavorably and falsely informed on current events:

"It is to be hoped Canadians do not take their war news from such popular American periodicals as Time and Life.

"Both these magazines, in their issues of last week, accepted as fact the unconfirmed German claim that an entire British convoy of 86,000 tons had been sunk in mid-Atlantic by a German raider. Time, which would rather be smart than accurate, talked of a 'disaster,' of gloom and sinking hearts in Britain.

"Fortunately, by the time the magazines were on sale here, the truth was coming out. The gallant stand of the Jervis Bay had robbed the German pocket-battleship of most of what it must have thought an easy bag, and now it is known that only four ships out of a convoy of 38 were lost.

"Even official German statements have a high percentage of fiction and the American news magazines ought to know from experience the danger of accepting as fact anything emanating from Berlin, unless it is corroborated by London or some other dependable and informed quarter."

PROPAGANDA plays a vital part during wars. Aerial warfare makes civilian populations more exposed to war's terrors than armed defensive forces, who are prepared to meet attack. Hitler figures that if he can break down civilian morale by ceaseless bombing and propaganda, victory will be his. His plans succeeded in overcoming some of the western European nations very quickly. His calculations were upset in trying to conquer Britain. That nation was unprepared at the time the late Prime Minister Chamberlain went to Munich. But it is now steadily pushing forward its plans to carry the war into Europe to liberate the nations conquered by Hitler and to uphold the cause of freedom and Democracy.

CONCERNING the Siros Report, resulting from the Rowell Royal Commission's sittings throughout Canada, there is no doubt that popular opinion favors action on it as early as possible, despite the war now in progress. It is a sincere attempt to re-adjust Dominion and provincial relations, for since the Act of Confederation was approved there have been developments throughout the Dominion which were not foreseen and therefore were not provided for in the original Act. Submissions were made to the Commission by representative organizations and individuals when the Commission held its sittings in Alberta—and it is regretted that our government did not attempt to assist or co-operate in any way with the efforts of the Commission. In fact Premier Aberhart's recent comment on the recommendations contained in the report indicate that he still has an antagonistic attitude toward the Dominion government, apparently because his theories on the creation of purchasing power are not seriously considered. At a time such as we are now experiencing, and because of the progress and development throughout Canada, there is no doubt that thinking people realize that the so-called "Charter of Re-Confederation" should be proceeded with in order to keep in step with the times.

Mail For Soldiers Overseas Lost When Convoy Attacked

When the C. P. R. freighter "Beaverford" was lost by enemy action recently in the Atlantic, a large number of bags containing military mail from the Base Post Office, Ottawa, which included thousands of parcels of tobacco intended for soldiers overseas, went down with the ship. The post office states that "The anxiety and disappointment caused by the failure of thousands of these parcels and letters to reach their destination will undoubtedly give rise to a series of complaints both from the soldiers who had been expecting the parcels and from their families or friends in Canada. Such complaints will be fully understandable, but in view of the circumstances you will appreciate our position."

(The Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, Ontario)
John Michael of Hamilton had his picture in the Toronto Star a few days ago. He looked like Hitler—and how! His sister is Mrs. Gus Annis of this town whose husband runs the central pool room, but she is not too pleased with the resemblance.
John believes his striking resemblance to Hitler may help finance the downfall of the Nazi Fuehrer if either of two overtures from movie corporations reach the contract stage. He would contribute money earned this way to the Red Cross. Michael is dubbed "Adolph" in the Hamilton cafe where he works with his brother-in-law.
Dinner patrons clamor to have him "comb his hair down." He is son of a Greek Orthodox minister and was born in Kato Kolinnas, Tripolites, Greece. He was two years short of receiving a degree in medicine when he left Greece.
Although now a naturalized citizen of Canada for the past five years, the recent Italian invasion of his homeland, the cradle of democracy, makes John's blood boil and he would like nothing better than to get just one good crack at the Axis partner to whom he bears such a resemblance.
John remembers that Hitler has been called "handsome" so does not grieve too much for the superficial likeness which links him with the "Beast of Berlin."

LEGION WILL HELP EDUCATE THOUSANDS OF MEN UNDER ARMS

Canadian Legion War Services has announced that its fall and winter program of education among the forces at sea, on land and in the air, is now under way and that applications are being received from men in all parts of the Dominion who wish to take up or to continue studies in academics and vocations.

According to Lieut.-Col. Wilfrid Bovey, O. B. E., of Montreal, national chairman of the Legion's military education division, negotiations conducted during the summer have resulted in the wholehearted co-operation of every provincial department of education, and scores of prominent educationists and qualified instructors have offered their services on an honorary basis. It is anticipated that between three and four thousand men under arms in Canada alone, with hundreds more stationed in Great Britain, Newfoundland and Iceland, will become enrolled as students for the new study season.

Col. Bovey said it was expected that a Legion education officer would leave shortly for England to establish classes among the Canadian forces overseas. He pointed out there would be a great demand for such activity if Hitler confines his assaults on Britain to the air.

Nationalism In Hungary

Strength Was Shown In Defeat Of Nazi Election Candidates

For a country living in the shadow of Germany and indebted to Hitler for two large slices of lost territory, the first in the break-up of Czechoslovakia and the second in the partition of Rumania, Hungary manages to maintain a certain measure of independence. Many signs of this are visible to those who keep an eye on the straws blowing in the wind that sweeps over Central and South-eastern Europe. The latest is the overwhelming defeat administered in a local election to the candidates of the party supported by the Hungarian Nazis. In contrast to the Rumanian Iron Guard, the home-grown Nazis have never got very far in Hungary, and they are not getting far now, despite the release of their leader from prison and the greater freedom allowed to his followers since the Vienna decision in Hungary's favor.

Nationalism is stronger in Hungary than in most of the neighboring countries, but everywhere in this region it is very strong, and while it represents an old order, in the opinion of many an order that is passing, it is a mighty obstacle to Hitler's new order. It suggests for the thousandth time how much easier it is to overturn Europe than it is to denationalize Europe.—New York Times.

Tribute To Chamberlain

Saved England By Delaying War Says U.S. Ambassador to Britain
"Can any one imagine what would have happened to England if the blitzkrieg of the summer of 1940 had occurred in September of 1938?" With this question Joseph P. Kennedy, American ambassador at the Court of St. James, closed a few pertinent remarks directed at those who have criticized Mr. Chamberlain and the Munich pact. There have been a lot of these critics on this side of the Atlantic and a lot of them in Canada who ought to have known better. Mr. Kennedy, who was at the centre of things, does not share their views. In the course of his radio address to the people of the United States he said:

"And speaking about peace, in the last year I have read a lot of irresponsible writing, most of it of a critical nature, about the Munich pact. The criticism in my judgment is not justified. Mr. Chamberlain hailed it as 'peace in our time' and was cheered by thousands of people who had the dread of the war in their hearts—a war that came to them now, night after night, in a relentless shattering of bombs, death and destruction. He and nearly every one in Great Britain knew that Munich was but an armistice, a last opportunity given to the Allies to make up, in part at least, for their tragic failure to understand the peril to their very lives as nations. Can any one imagine what would have happened to England if the blitzkrieg of the summer of 1940 had occurred in September of 1938?"

Mr. Kennedy declared that he had always been of the opinion that if Mr. Chamberlain had had 5,000 first-line planes at home when he conferred at Munich, we would have had "peace in our time." But he had not, and the reason given by the ambassador for the lack was that the very advantages which a democracy has become disadvantages in the task of preparing for a war that it thinks may never happen.

Britain had listened to the Oxford Union pledge never to fight for King and country, it had wallowed in the pacifist sentiment of "Cry Havoc," and it had indulged in peace ballots. Democracy being what it is no Government could have survived the onslaught of an adequate measure of rearmament. It would have been defeated in Parliament as well as at the polls.

Mr. Chamberlain knew the state of Britain's defenses when he played the poker game at Munich. He was a year's respite, but he was under no illusion as to what was to follow. He immediately speeded up rearmament. His great achievement was that when war came he carried into it a united Empire and gave the democratic world a true appreciation of the issue.—Toronto Evening Telegram.

A Very Great City

But London Will Arise Even Greater When War Is Over

London to-day is proving what has long been acknowledged, that it is a very great city. Yet Londoners are by no means a vain lot. They thought they have a mighty cathedral, the apparatus of an Empire, and an unrivalled historic past to excuse any vanity they might feel; but, in spite of all, the flower that is called London Pride remains a very modest one. These days are not the first in which London has endured an ordeal by fire. The very St. Paul's that, by courage and fortitude, has been saved from the bombs of the twentieth century, would never have been built but for the great fire of the seventeenth, which destroyed its predecessor, and literally left the ground clear for the genius of Sir Christopher Wren. Church after noble church, built in the smoking ruins of the fire of which Pepys left a memorable description, to-day bears witness to the courage and determination with which the London of nearly three hundred years ago took hold of the unhappy opportunity presented to it.

Contemporary Londoners are worthy of their ancestors; and the appointment of a Minister of Building shows that the British nation is determined that out of the present trial an even greater city shall arise, beautified by the aspirations, and strengthened by the courage of its citizens.—Christian Science Monitor.

Where They Come From

New York Museum Gives Ideas For Some Of The Styles

Like all museums, the New York Museum of Costume Art has a churchly air, a musty smell, a way of making you lower your voice as you stop to examine—"costume worn by young Persian girl, 1740."

But there's no sense lowering your voice respectfully if a couple of New York designers happen to be at the work in the Museum, as they so often are.

"Hey, Joe, see this horse collar?" The man slapped the shoulder of the Red wolf with hands of Persian lamb forming a "horse collar," in the manner of a woman of Korea a hundred years ago.

Speed Up Industry

Britain Drafting A Million Men And Women Into War Work

An industrial speed-up has been ordered by the British government which will involve the drafting of 1,000,000 men and women into the production of munitions by August, 1941.

The object of the scheme is to place Britain's output of war essentials by the end of the second year of war at a pitch reached in 1918, four years after the outbreak of the first Great War.

Of the 1,000,000 new workers to be drafted to wartime essential industries, 500,000 will be women. The government will comb the non-essential industries for trained workers who can be transferred to the production of planes, tanks, warships and other implements of war.

Extra training schools will be opened to give them experience in precision work necessary for the production of modern war machines. As many as possible will be recruited from the ranks of the unemployed, who number between 500,000 and 600,000, including thousands of unemployables.

It is believed possible that the speed-up will involve requisitioning industrial property under government management. This principle is already in operation in many branches of wartime production, the government taking control of factories falling behind in production or where a change of management is thought to be preferable.

The scheme will be operated in collaboration with Britain's powerful trade unions which have in effect rendered their rights and privileges for the duration of the war work in co-operation with the authorities in wartime production.

It is impossible to show what increase the speed-up will mean in Britain's industrial army because the government stopped publishing figures on the outbreak of war.

General Smuts Was Right

Declared This War Most Desperate

Event Humankind Ever Faced

"We are just at the merest beginning of things. I take a very serious view of the war to-day. I think the war is going to be a mortal affair. The nations know that this must be the last, that it is now neck or nothing." This statement was made by General Smuts in Cape Town. From the very hour of the war declaration General Smuts has said, in public and privately, that this is the most desperate event that has ever faced humanity. He has never varied that assertion even during recent months of this, the most fantastic, uncanny major war in history, when for weeks on end there was scarcely an event worth reporting on the whole front. —Johannesburg Times.

Proved Poor Economy

New York Company Stopped Advertising And Lost Business

The New York Post says: Before the first World War, one company sold 90 per cent. of all the truck axles made in the U.S. and was a consistent advertiser. But with a huge backlog of war orders, it quit advertising as a matter of economy.

Then along came a rival firm, which started a vigorous advertising campaign and after things shook down to a post-war level, the once-dominant company that had sold 90 per cent. of the nation's axles found it could recapture only 10 per cent. of the market from its new and lusty competitors.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

DECEMBER 1

AN EXACTING DISCIPLINE

GOLDEN TEXT: No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God. Luke 9:62.

Lesson: Luke 9.

Devotional reading: Matthew 18: 24-27.

Explanations and Comments

How Jesus Regarded Discipline. Luke 9:57-62. The three men whose stories are told together here probably did not come to Jesus one after another, but the purpose was to show that Jesus regarded discipline. The first man was very enthusiastic, very sure that he wanted to be a follower of Jesus; and he came to Jesus declaring, "Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." Jesus, however, doubted that the man's purpose would last when he learned what following him would mean. Matthew says the man was a scribe, one, therefore, who would have to give up, for he was an important personage, used to authority, to security of office and of income. Jesus accordingly discouraged him by telling him to count the cost. The foxes have holes and the birds of heaven have nests, Jesus told him, but he himself was utterly homeless, he had not where to lay his head.

Another man whom Jesus bade follow him answered, "Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father." He asked to indefinitely postpone obedience. "Leave the dead to bury their own dead," was Jesus' reply to him; "but go, thou must publish abroad the kingdom of God." Jesus' words sound harsh, but he knew that if the man did not come then he would not come at all, and he would have him leave his customary life then and there.

Yet another man professed a desire to follow Jesus, but would first go and bid farewell to his relatives. Though he had made up his mind to follow Jesus, his affections were calling him back.

Jesus told the man by his words, "No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God." The figure of speech will not be understood by one who has never seen a hand plow at work. The art of plowing lies in keeping the plow at the right depth and in a straight line. The plowman gives his whole attention to the work. Should he turn and look backward the plow would leave its intended track and would scratch the surface rather than turn up the needed amount of earth.

A Modest Hero

Capt. Olander, The Man Who Rescued Jervis Bay Survivors

Capt. Sven Olander, of the freighter Stureholm, who turned back to rescue the survivors of the Jervis Bay doesn't set up to be a hero, and the role doesn't seem to befit the fat, jovial manner of out of Gothenburg. "You know," he said, "I think that everyone would take the same risk."

But someone pointed out that there were 38 ships in the convoy, and it was Capt. Olander's 4,000-ton tramp that went back for the Jervis Bay's men and brought them to Canada.

"Well now," Capt. Olander rumbled in his difficult English, "maybe we were just smart." The raider wouldn't expect him to be hanging around the scene of the battle five hours later, he pointed out.

But there were other considerations, he admitted. They did so well for us that I didn't like to leave."

Someone suggested the British government would be coming through with a decoration or some other form of recognition. "Never mind that," said the captain. "Just keep those cargoes going through for us fellows."

CONCERTED HEALTH PROGRAMS

Why should we wait until we are faced with a serious war before we begin to take stock of our human assets?

This challenging question is asked in an editorial in the current issue of the magazine "Health," a Canadian publication.

"Why is the health and welfare of the average young man and woman not an essential objective in peacetime as well as in war-time?" the editorial asks.

When the suggestion was made in peacetime to examine the young men of the nation to determine their fitness or unfitness the cry was raised "impossible."

To-day, with a war on, the editorial states, medical examination of Canada's young men is proceeding apace. Every doctor in Canada is a medical examiner to be paid by the government.

"Soon it will be possible for our authorities to estimate with reasonable accuracy the number of young men in certain ages who are fit and by the same token those who are unfit—to serve in the army," states the editorial.

What was once considered impossible is now being done, the editorial says.

"If one desires to ask a further pertinent if not an impertinent question one may enquire why it is that in spite of the increasing disabilities which may be expected from either a financial depression or a war, frequently the first thing a government thinks of under such circumstances is to reduce health expenditures instead of increasing them?"

The editorial goes on: "When one considers that in war the fit are sacrificed on the altars of Mars and the unfit left at home a situation is discovered which should demand the attention of all political leaders."

The editorial commends a recent statement of Hon. Harold Kirby, Minister of Health for Ontario, who called attention to the importance of a concerted health program if Canada is to prosecute the war efficiently.

"One wishes that other ministers of health might present the case with equal vigor," states the editorial. "This journal is of the opinion that if health conservation is logical in peacetime it is essential in war-time, and health service is war service. If civilian morale is to be kept at a high level all health services must be maintained and indeed improved. Education of the public to this end should proceed forthwith."

"Now, Mr. Carlton, let us be our calm selves. What do you expect to find in this house? I imagine it is something very important."

"Imagine!" said Jim sternly. "Harlow, I'm going to put my cards on the table and tell you just what I want to find. First and foremost, I want Allen Rivers, who came here earlier in the evening with a letter from her employer. She has not been seen since."

Mr. Harlow did not smile.

"Really? Not been seen by you, I suppose you mean—"

"Wait, I haven't finished. A car was seen to drive away from Ellenbury's office in Theobalds road at half-past five. Miss Rivers was in that car—where is she now?"

Harlow looked at him steadily.

"I will not say that I don't know—unnecessarily lies are stupid."

He opened a drawer of his desk with great deliberation, and, taking out a bunch of keys, dropped them on his blotting paper.

"You may search every room in the house," he said. "And then tell me if you are as wise as I!"

The library itself needed no prolonged inspection. Jim went up the stairs, followed by Elk, and came last to the top door.

Harlow waited for him at the door of the little elevator.

"That is my housekeeper's room," he pointed. "You will recognize the door as the one which you locked a few hours ago."

"And this?" asked Jim.

Harlow turned the handle and threw the other door wide open. The room was as Jim had seen it on the previous night, and was unattended.

"We will start with the roof," said Carlton, and went up the narrow flight of stairs, opened the door and stepped out upon the flat roof. This time he carried a powerful lamp, but here also he drew blank. He made a circuit of the parapet and came back to where Harlow was waiting at the open door.

"Have you found a secret staircase?" Harlow was innocently staid. "They are quite common in Park Lane, but still a novelty in Pimlico. You touch a spring, something goes click, and there is a narrow winding stair leading to a still more secret room."

Jim made no answer to this sarcasm, but went downstairs. From room to room he passed, but there was no sign of the girl or of the bearded man, and at last he reached the ground floor.

"You have cellars? I should like to see those."

Harlow opened a small door in the paneling of the vestibule. They were in a rather high, flagged passage, at the end of which was the kitchen and servants' hall. From an open archway in one of the walls a flight of stone stairs descended to the basement, which was made up of three cellars, two of which were used for the storage of wine.

"This is not the whole extent of the cellar space," said Jim suspiciously, when he had finished his inspection.

"There are no other cellars," replied Harlow.

piled Harlow, with a weary sigh. "My good man, how very suspicious you are! Would you like to see the garage?"

Jim followed him up the steps, through the hall.

He was being played with—Jim Carlton knew that, and yet for some reason was not rattled.

"Harlow, where is Miss Rivers? You suggested you knew."

Harlow inclined his head gravely.

"If you will allow me to drive you a very little further, I can promise that I will put an end to all your present doubts."

They faced one another—Harlow towards the bright light that streamed from the garage.

"I'll call your bluff," said Jim at last.

A slow smile dawned on Harlow's face.

"So many people have done that," he said, "and yet here I am, with a royal flush permanently in hand! And all who have called—where are their chips?"

He opened the coupe door and after a second's hesitation Jim entered, Mr. Elk following. The big man shut the door.

"I have a high opinion of the police," he said, "and I realize that I am making you look rather foolish: I am sorry! This story of Harlow's penultimate joke shall go no farther than me."

He turned to the front of the car and stooped as if to start the engine. And then very leisurely he walked to the wall, put up his hand, and the garage was in darkness.

Jim saw the manoeuvre and leapt to the door, but it was locked; and even as he struggled to lower the window, there was a whine of machinery and the car began to sink slowly through the floor. Down, down it went upon its platform, and then, when the roof was a little below the level of the floor, the platform tilted forward, and the car slid gently onto an unseen track and thudded against rubber buffers and stopped.

Jim had got the window down and was half through when the hydraulic pillars beneath the platform slid up and closed the aperture with a gentle thud. In another second Elk was free. Wrenching open the driver's door, Jim switched on the powerful head lamps and illuminated the little chamber to which the car had sunk.

There were two more machines there, one in particular attracted his attention—an old hire car gray with mud, which was still wet. Evidently the place was a very ordinary type of underground garage, though he had never seen such extensive equipment as a hydraulic lift in a private establishment. The walls were of dressed stone; at one end was a low iron door, not locked, so far as he could see, but fastened with two steel bolts. It was probably a petrol store, he thought, and the position under the courtyard before the garage confirmed this guess.

He looked at Elk.

"How foolish do you feel?" he asked bitterly.

Elk shook his head.

"Nothin' makes me feel foolish," he said cheerfully, "but I certainly didn't expect to see the end so soon."

"End?"

Elk nodded.

"Not mine—not yours: Harlow's. He's through with the penultimate mean anyway?"

And when it was explained, Elk's face brightened.

"He's got one big line to finish on! I'll bet it is the biggest job that's ever made the police stop laffin. And I'll tell you—"

He stopped; both heads went round toward the little iron door. Somebody was knocking freely and Jim's heart almost stopped beating.

"Somebody behind that door," said Elk. "I never thought old man Harlow ran a dungeon."

Jim ran to the place, slipped back the bolts and flung the door open. He staggered into the light the wild and dishevelled figure of an elderly man. For a moment Jim did not recognize him. He was costless, his crumpled collar was unfashionable, but it was the look in his face that arrested Jim's attention.

"Ellenbury!" breathed Jim.

The lawyer it was, but the change in him since Jim had seen him last was startling. The wide-open eyes glared from one to the other and then he raised his trembling hand to his mouth.

"Where is she?" he whispered fiercely. "What did he do with her?"

Jim's heart turned to lead.

"Who—Miss Rivers?"

Ellenbury peered at him as though he remembered his voice but could not identify him.

"Stebbing's girl!" he croaked. "He took the ax—Harlow!" The old man swung an imaginary ax. "Ugh! . . . killed her!"

Jim Carlton's hand was thrust to the wall for support. He face was colorless—he could not speak and it was Elk who took up the questioning of this apparition.

"Killed her?"

Ellenbury nodded.

"Where?"

"On the edge of the kitchen garden . . . there's a pit. You could put somebody there and nobody would guess. He knew all about the pit. I didn't know he was the chauffeur—he had a little black moustache and he'd been driving me all day."

Elk laid his hand gently on the little man's shoulder and he shrank back with a sound of weeping.

"Listen, Mr. Ellenbury, you must tell us all you know and try to be calm. Nobody will hurt you. Did he kill Miss Rivers?"

The man nodded violently.

"With an ax—my ax . . . I saw her lying there on the furnace-room floor. She was very beautiful and white and I saw that he had killed her. He went back to the house, for I did not wish—I did not wish—he shuddered, his face in his hands—to see her in that pit, with the water . . . green water . . . ugh . . . ugh!"

He was fighting back the vision, his long fingers working like a piano player's.

"Yes . . . yes, you saw her again?"

asked Jim huskily.

He had.

"Where?"

"In the back of the car—where the suitcases were—all huddled up on the floor with a blanket thrown over me. I sat beside the devil and he talked! So softly! God! You'd have thought he had never murdered anybody! He said he was going to take me for a holiday—where I'd get well. But I knew he was lying."

He saw the devil was lying and that he was forging new links in my chain. He put me in there!"

He almost screamed the words as his wavering finger pointed to the open door of his prison.

"Ellenbury, for God's sake try to think—Is Allen Rivers alive?"

He nearly swooned when the old man shook his head.

"Dead!" He nodded with every repetition of the word. "Dead, dead, dead! My ax . . . it was outside the kitchen door . . . there and there was blood . . ."

"Say, listen, Carlton," it was Elk's harsh voice. "I'm not believing this. This bird's mad!"

"Mad! Am I mad?" Ellenbury struck his thin chest. "She's upstairs—I saw him carry her up—and the woman with the yellow face, and the man with a beard . . . they made me come with them . . . left me here in the dark for a long time and then made me come with them—look!"

He dragged Elk into the little prison house. There was a bed and wardrobe; carpet covered the floor. It was a self-contained little suite in the depth of the cellar.

Fumbling on the wall he found a light switch and the room was flooded with a rose-colored glow that came from concealed lights in the angle of a stone cornice.

"Look—look!"

The lawyer dragged open the door of the wardrobe. At the bottom was a heap of clothes—men's clothes. A crumpled dress shirt, a velvet dress-jacket.

"Sir Joseph's clothes!" gasped Elk.

Had One Advantage

A motorist touring the American South stopped near a run-down farm and called to a native, stretched out under a tree at the side of the road.

"I see you raise hogs almost exclusively down here. Do they pay better than corn and potatoes?"

"Can't say they do, suh," drawled the native yawning, "but hogs don't need no hoein'."

Paper From Desert Plant

Alpha Grown in Algeria Now Being Used By France

France, suffering from a white paper famine, due to the blockade which cuts off customary wood pulp imports from Scandinavia, has turned to alpha, one of its colonial riches, for making paper pulp.

Algeria grows about 8,000,000 acres of alpha which Tunisia raises 2,000,000 acres. France previously imported most of its paper and wood pulp from Norway and Sweden, but since the start of the war the shortage was so acute that French newspapers were printed on a single sheet, six days a week.

France has been obliged to reduce paper consumption by four-fifths and most of the periodicals have been contracted to the same size as newspapers. Magazines also have been hit by this paper penalty and are condensing the number of their articles. Even the Journal Officiel, the government's official organ, appears on two pages, compared to the normal 20 or 40.

While France was importing paper as wood pulp from Sweden and Norway, England was buying up the stocks of alpha, of which Algeria exported approximately 200,000 tons a year. It left French North Africa in the form of dried and compressed balls and returned to France in paper form at a high price.

Alpha now grows on the vast and monotonous steppes of the high Algerian Sahara where the climate allows nothing else to grow. Despite the cold in winter and the heat in summer, this plant grows well in this atmosphere. Alpha is a sort of reed, growing about three feet high, which the natives used to make brushes, nets, sandals and a sort of woven carpet. The paper famine drew attention to alpha and it underwent pulp tests very satisfactorily.

Alpha paper is high quality, resistant and suitable for printing. It is specially adapted for helio impression and paper which is used for this kind of work must incorporate at least half alpha pulp.

With this source of paper pulp France once more will again be able to furnish the paper industry with its necessary raw material.

Was Never Talkative

Late Calvin Coolidge Once Made Address In Single Word

Before Calvin Coolidge left for the White House, so the story goes, his ardent neighbors decided to recognize his desire to the old farm by giving him a handmade rake. They made the presentation an elaborate ceremonial. The orator who presented the rake dwelt on the qualities of the hickory wood from which he said it was made. "Hickory," he said, "is the President in sturdy, strong, resilient, unbroken," and so on, and so on. Then he handed the rake to Mr. Coolidge and the audience settled back for the speech of acknowledgment. The President turned the implement over, scrutinized it carefully, and then made his address in a single word. "Ash," he said.

Queer Law In Samos

People Work As Unit And No One Owns Anything

There is no such thing as private property among Samosians. The great majority of the village work is done by the young men, working together as a unit. They fish, take care of the plantations, and build the dug-out canoes and longboats. The young women also work together as a unit, making cloth, weaving mats, and cooking. Even a person's clothes or tools are not his own, as a simple request for them must be granted. A Samosian can take advantage of this custom, but a victim has plenty of opportunity to revenge himself or herself—Maclean's Magazine.

Photographs Show How To Pack Parcels For Men Overseas

Many Canadian soldiers in Britain have complained that parcels from home have not arrived so Canadian postal authorities in England have decided to use photographs to show the folks back home how to address and pack parcels correctly.

It has been found that many of the missing parcels have fallen to pieces in transit because of bad packing. Others have been insufficiently addressed.

The photographs will be sent to Canada to help soldiers' relatives to address and pack the parcels properly.

Strange Diet

Germans Resort To Crude Menus In Time Of War

News that dogs meat has been legalized for human consumption in greater Germany recalls stories of famine in the Reich of the first Great War.

Dog meat then was scarce. Horse meat, served to-day in some Nazi restaurants, sold then for 86 cents a pound.

In April, 1917, a Dresden restaurant scored a coup by purchasing an elephant from a travelling circus to provide choice steaks and cutlets.

The last American woman to return from Germany after the first Great War asserted that in Leipzig she found the piece de resistance on local menus was elephant meat, the heat being considered the greatest delicacy.

Sausage, standard of the German table, was made from horse, donkey, mule, fish, goat and rabbit meat and from kohlrabi, a cabbage-like plant which was colored pink and speckled.

In May, 1917, an agricultural expert at Passau, Bavaria, advised Germans to "follow the examples of Nebuchadnezzar and eat grass."

Other scientists proudly announced that certain layers of "edible earth" had been located in the lower valley of the Vistula.

The Swiss military attaché in Berlin in 1917 said a chemical analysis of bread showed: Corn, 12 per cent; barley, 22 per cent; and wheat, 66 per cent. Pepper was found to contain 82 per cent. ashes and two per cent. sand.

Heaven must be in me before I can be in heaven.—Charles Stanford.

Heaven means to be one with God.—Confucius.

Happiness is neither within us only, or without us; it is the union of ourselves with God.—Pascal.

I would not give one moment of heaven for all the joy and riches of the world, even if it lasted for thousands and thousands of years.—Martin Luther.

Because God is ever present, no boundary of time can separate us from Him and the heaven of His presence; and because God is Life, all life is eternal.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Canada's Egg Exports

Have Announced During Past Year To Ten Million Dozen

While Canada continues to have a wide variety in her agriculture, there is no reason to let such things as wheat glut the too much on our wheat. Though the load of wheat may bear heavily upon us for the moment, there are encouraging indications that, given time and wise planning, we can achieve the agricultural prosperity which we have always looked on as our due.

Consider for instance, the statistics regarding eggs. Our exports of these in the past year have amounted to ten million dozen, almost exactly ten times a normal year's sales. Indications are that this volume of exports can be kept up, and one problem in a short time may be one of maintaining sufficient production.

While such a demand for our products continues, we have little in the way of real worry about our farm industry.—Windsor Daily Star.

Many Gay Rugs In New Booklet

A jolly colorful Navaho rug to brighten a boy's room and gladden his heart—or to add a gay note to your living room!

Weave it easily from black and red cotton cloth and parcel-post string—on a simple wooden loom you can make at home.

Screw together 2-inch strips of wood to make a rectangular frame a little larger than 21½ by 38 inches—the size of the completed rug with fringe. On shorter sides drive in small wire nails about ½ inch apart. Now you're ready to warp and weave.

When using string for the warp use it black or you may prefer black candlewick yarn. Fabric for weaving should be cut in long strips ½ inch wide.

To warp, wind string around the nails as shown in our diagram and carry back and forth across loom. Fasten securely and then with fingers or a tapestry needle weave fabric over and under warp threads—as in diagram. A simple pattern shows you how to weave the striking design.

For pattern and complete directions for the Navaho rug, see our new 32-page booklet. Tells how to make lovely hooked rugs, too—also woven, crocheted and crocheted rugs, many other stunning kinds.

Chicago Man Seems To Have Summed Up Radio Fiends

The following letter appeared in the Chicago Daily News:

After listening to radio from early morning till well past midnight I came to the conclusion that all the radio fiends are morons who can turn their heads on early in the morning, full blast, and it can go on and on. They are not particular as to the programs as long as they hear some noise.

I think the reason for that is the heads are empty and, of course, when they are empty they just can't stand that aimless descending on them. No brains can't think, hence the radio. What other excuse is there?
